“Arlington Heights is a small neighborhood in the eastern Hilltop area of Pittsburgh that is completely surrounded by the larger neighborhoods of Arlington and the South Side Slopes. Arlington Heights was originally composed of 660 housing units built by the Housing Authority of Pittsburgh in 1942. Initially, the residents of these units consisted solely of war workers who had lived too far from their jobs or were living away from their families. These units later turned into public housing, though much of the barracks-style housing has been demolished in recent years.”
